“ Chris was (is) my brother, there was 6 years. Me being older I used to mother him & help take care of him when he was little. He was born while we were stationed in Okinawa, Japan, at Naha Air Force base. To the Japanese people he was always a delight due to his red curly hair & bright blue eyes! They marveled over him. My brother was born in motion and never stopped lol. He got into a lot of scrapes growing up but always came out of it laughing. I love him so much and nothing was quite like his big bear hugs. He hugged you and you knew you had been hugged. 😊. Chris helped everyone he knew and didn't know. He was a gentle sentimental man who loved his wife Rhonda, children Chris Lee & Mysti Dawn. He adored his mother Jean Davis Marshall & helped her constantly. After Mysti died last November the light in his life went out. His heart was broken & he wanted just to see her again. We talked several times about his & Mysti' shared belief in Jesus. Chris had trusted Jesus as having died for his sins thus paying the way to heaven. Reminding him that he would see Mysti again, he cried, “I can't wait”. He isn't waiting any longer. 😇. I look forward to hugging them both too!

I haven't seen Chris since we were kids but I remember he was a good person and fun to hang with. I remember going camping at Point Lookout MD, and walking through the old abandoned Point Lookout Hotel at night with him, - spooky but fun. This life is but a stepping stone. I am glad you are with God and your Loved ones. -Mark Kane “ I’ll always remember trying to sneak in an all-nighter gaming session with Chris, and avoid waking you up (even though you already knew what he and I were doing). “You guys think you’re slick, and you’re not.” followed by your very distinctive laugh.

Countless memories in Ohio, and many memories of living in Florida with y’all. I’ll never forget that it was you who introduced me to the wonders of Siesta Key, and when you let me join in the drum circle with your bongo hand-carved from Juniper wood. I’ll always have great memories from you/with you. Please rest easy, “Big Chris” aka “Father of my other Brother”.

Rhonda & Chris Lee, my deepest condolences/sympathies for your loss. My heart is with you both during these trying times.
