“ I remember when Justin took his first steps. I was spending a few days during the summer at the house in Zanesville when he was first learning to stand and walk. I remember it well because early in one particular day's efforts to master the skill, he took a few steps stopped and stood just long enough to wet his diaper and then went thump on his bottom. Sometimes you just have to concentrate when you think people might be watching. Early stage fright? Not discouraged by this minor set back, he tried again....
I also remember the times when he would come to the farm for family gatherings... how excited he would get to be around everyone, his eye were always wide open as if if he blinked he might miss something. He would keep walking around the house visiting everyone.... shaking hands and a big smile. He'll be missed here, but I'm sure Grandma and Grandpa Miller will be happy to be with Justin again.

Cousin Shawn.

“ We remember Justin as always being excited. when he saw us, having a big smile and saying our names. It was sad to see him when he no longer responded to our presence. I remember him carrying his books and binders under his arm like they were a security blanket. Justin had his little quirks that we didn't always understand but respected. He will be missed.
